

Your NHS doctor will never look at you in the same way again.

Gone are the days of old fashioned x-ray films. Now an advanced digital technology known as PACS, or 'Picture Archiving and Communications System,' enables healthcare professionals to examine patients' x-rays and scans faster and in greater detail than ever before. This has halved the average turnaround time for a diagnostic report.

BT has delivered the majority of these systems in London where PACS is now in use in every NHS hospital, every day.

In the near future, millions more patients will benefit from this medical advance, along with many other initiatives from NHS Connecting for Health.

Just one example of how technology is helping to give you the best possible diagnosis and care.

The doctor will see more of you now.

www.bt.com/health

Bringing it all together